2) Permanent Migration falls rises but Temporary visas rise

Government has cut the migration program ceiling from 190,000 to 160,000 per annum but at the same time is forecasting net migration to rise from 241,700 in 2017 to 259,600 in 2018 and 271,700 in 2019. This was after it forecast a steady decline in net migration in the 2018 Budget. This is likely the result of changes to temporary skilled entry policy, working holiday makers and a continuing rise in visitors changing status after arrival including record numbers applying for asylum.

It should be noted that the migration program reflects the number of permanent or provisional visas granted while net migration is the number of people arriving in Australia and remaining here for 12 months out of 16 irrespective of visa type or citizenship, less the number of people who had been counted in the resident population and then depart Australia for 12 months out of 16.

The 30,000 places for Employer Sponsored migration is down on the outcome of 35,582 visas in 2017-18. The existing backlog of applications in these categories should make the 2019-20 planning level readily achievable. However, as applications for employer sponsored migration in 2017-18 fell by 27.1 percent compared to 2016-17, and as the RSMS will be closed to new applications, demand in this category can be expected to decline in subsequent years, especially following the changes made in 2017-18 when the sub-class 457 visa was abolished and requirements for employer sponsored permanent migration were tightened significantly. Further tightening of employer sponsored temporary entry as proposed by the ALP would lead to additional fall off in the application rate for permanent employer sponsored migration. Note over 80 percent of visa grants in permanent employer sponsored categories are to people already in Australia on long-term temporary visas (ie already counted in net migration). Grants of employer sponsored permanent visas thus make relatively little contribution to net migration. The Skilled Independent allocation of 18,652 will also be readily achieved as it also now includes long-term New Zealand citizens who have an expedited pathway to permanent residence. The New Zealand citizens obtaining this visa make no contribution at that time to net migration having already been counted many years earlier.

If this visa is to be kept to its planning level, the Minister will need to release places slowly and only to applicants scoring very highly on the points test. The proposed minor changes to the points test would assist some applicants reach the pass mark the Minister sets.

Even after including New Zealand citizens, the planning level of 18,652 for this visa category is less than half that in recent years (2017-18 – 39,137; 2016-17 – 42,422; 2015-16 – 43,994; 2014-15 – 43,990; 2013-14 – 44,984). Given these migrants now have a four year wait for access to social welfare, some reduction in this category is sensible to reduce the risk of destitution.

As around half of the migrants entering in this category are offshore at time of visa grant, the reduction in this category will have a greater negative impact on net migration.

The new Skilled Employer Sponsored Regional visa will start from 16 November 2019. While this visa is open to a wider range of occupations than the RSMS which it replaces, potential applicants may be deterred by the fact this visa will be a three year provisional visa with no guarantee of permanent residence if they lose their job during those three years. The 9,000 place planning level for this visa in 2019-20 appears very ambitious, especially given the many extra requirements now in place for all employer sponsored visas. Note around 80 percent of RSMS visa grants were traditionally to people already in Australia on a long-term temporary visa. If this new visa follows the same pattern, it will have little impact on net migration at time of visa grant.

The 14,000 places for the new Skilled Work Regional visa in 2019-20 also appears ambitious given the significantly increased requirements of the pathway to permanent residence. The key will be whether state/territory governments are prepared to make sufficient use of this new visa and whether sufficient applicants with the requisite skills and experience make an expression of interest for state/territory government nomination. Note the Victorian and ACT Governments made little use of the provisional state/territory nominated visa this new visa replaces. Take up of this visa will be heavily reliant on extra nominations particularly by the NSW and Queensland governments.

The state/territory nominated direct permanent visa planning level of 24,986 and the BIIP planning of 6,682 should both be readily achievable as there is significant excess demand for these places. It should be noted, however, that the combined planning level for the new state/territory provisional visa plus the state/territory permanent skilled visa is well in excess of the rate at which state/territory governments were nominating skilled migrants in 2018-19. The Commonwealth Government is relying on an overall significant boost in state/territory nominations in 2019-20. If the labour market weakens, state/territory governments will be reluctant to do so.

Inclusion of an allocation of 5,000 places for the new Global Talent stream of the existing Temporary Skill Shortage visa (Sub-Class 482) is a new phenomenon. These visas have never before been included in the permanent migration program. By doing so, the Government is effectively cutting the migration program by a further 5,000 places. Given the very slow take up of this new visa stream to date, it is likely the 5,000 places may not be filled.

In the Family Stream, the key will be the intention to maintain the Partner category at 39,799 places against the background of a backlog exceeding 80,000. This is not sustainable either morally or legally, noting that s87 of the Migration Act does not allow Government to cap spouse visas. The legality of the Government's method of delaying grant of Partner visas by slowing the rate at which processing officers are appointed to cases is also questionable.

Whoever wins government in the May election will need to deal with the excess demand for Partner visas and the likely shortfall in the new regional visas. If the overall planning level is held at 160,000, the balance of the program would shift towards the Family Stream if the Partner visa backlog is accommodated. The shift in the balance is likely to attract criticism from the business community which will want the Skill Stream maintained if not increased.

3) TRA Skills Assessments

Update on TRA processing of skills assessments -

Processing delays

The ongoing high demand for Provisional Skills Assessments (PSA) has caused an increase in the time it takes to complete PSA application assessments, which is around 90 days currently.

Agents can assist to reduce processing time by ensuring that all applications are submitted 'decision ready' which means all necessary documentation is included. The evidence required in the application should clearly support:

The applicant's qualification or work experience claim,

Ensure qualifications include the formal transcript and,

Employment information includes supervisor or employer contact details that can be clearly associated with the business.

Incomplete or unclear information is a primary reason for delays and may result in an application being made unsuccessful. Supplementary information will be requested if needed for clarification but reducing the need for multiple exchanges will assist to speed up the process. Agent Digest – Student Visa Program | 3

Processing timeframes are also affected by a large number of general enquiries, particularly those simply seeking a status update. Applications are processed in order of receipt and TRA will not consider any requests to expedite the processing of an application. The high volume of general enquiries has a net effect of slowing assessments down. Agents in particular are asked to assist by reducing email traffic and understanding the processes in place.

Submission timeframes

There has recently been a change in the time allowed by TRA for application documents to be submitted to us after the applicant has registered and paid online. From 1 April, 2019, the period has been reduced to 14 days to align TRA timelines with the requirements of the Department of Home Affairs.

The role of Migration Agents

We have noted increased engagement by migration agents across the whole of TRA's Job Ready Program (JRP).

Agents should note that under the JRP Program Guidelines, a migration agent or representative can act on behalf of an applicant only for Step 1 (PSA) or Step 4 (JRFA) of the JRP.

For steps 2 (JRE) and 3 (JRWA), all correspondence must be with the applicant. Any documents provided to us by an agent instead of the applicant will not be processed and will be returned to the sender.

6) Indians now 3rd largest group of Migrants

The Indian population in Australia has exponentially grown in the last two years according to the latest figures released by the Australian Bureau of Statistics (ABS).

The ABS's preliminary estimates suggest there are 592,000 Indians living in Australia as of June 2018. This is a 30 per cent jump compared to Census 2016 figures which recorded 455,389 Indians living in Australia. India with 592,000 people moved into third place dropping the New Zealand born (568,000) down to the fourth place.

India now accounts for 2.4% of the Australian population and the median age of an Indian migrant is revealed to be 34 years, same as those born in Australia.

India has been Australia's biggest source of migrants since 2016.

While 33,310 places of 162,417 permanent places in 2017-18 were granted to Indian citizens, 38,854 visas of 183,608 places went to Indian citizens in 2016-17.

The number of Indian students studying in Australia too ascended to a seven-year high in 2018. According to November 2017 figures, close to 70,000 students were studying in Australian universities and colleges.

Over 7 million migrants were living in Australia as of June 2018, with people born in England continuing to be the largest group of overseas-born residents.

ABS Assistant Director of Migration Statistics Neil Scott said new figures showed that in 2018 just over 29 per cent of Australia's resident population was born overseas.

"Australia's multicultural society is made up of migrants born in every country around the world. Although almost 18 million Australians were born here, our society is continuing to become more culturally diverse over time", Mr Scott said.

China ranked second on this list with 651,000 people born in China residing in Australia today.

These figures include temporary visa holders like international students and those on temporary work visas.

The 2016 Census revealed that along with population, Indian languages too had grown in Australia.

Hindi came out as the top Indian language spoken at home in Australia with 159,652 speakers, with Punjabi a close second at 132,496.

Hindi and Punjabi have made it to the top ten languages spoken in Australia.

The other languages which have seen a big jump are Tamil (73,161), Bengali (54,566), Malayalam (53,206), Gujarati (52,888), Telugu (34,435), Marathi (13,055) and Kannada (9,701).

Other languages recorded in the 2016 census were Konkani language (2,416), Kashmiri language (215), Oriya (721) and Sindhi spoken by 1,592 speakers across Australia.

7) PTE testing verification

We have seen reports that some agents have been requested by DHA to verify PTE test results that are between 2 and 3 years old. (DHA accept results up to 3 years old for skilled visas)

We asked PTE for verification of this issue and they gave the following information ...

".. We haven't had any changes to our score verification process. The Department of Home Affairs accepts PTE Academic scores for up to three years from testing date.

Test takers should always digitally assign their PTE Academic scores from their PTE Academic account so that the DHA representative can view the scores from our online database (which they can view for up to three years). Most people pick the automatically send their scores when they click through the registration steps, however many forget to do so and I would like to think that an agent would help a client through the process and not just complete it for them.

DHA do often contact our support team directly if they are unable to view a score report when they know the score report is older than two years and hasn't been assigned. Our customer support team assists them further with the verification.

We are in the process of trying to make score verification easier for institutions and hope that in the near future it will be an easier process for all those involved..."

Skilled - Independent (subclass 189)	80	15/03/2019 9:40 am
Skilled - Regional Provisional (subclass 489)	80	12/10/2018 6:31 am

Point scores and the dates of effect cut off for the pro rata occupations in the 11 April 2019 invitation round.

Due to high levels of demand, and in keeping with previous years, the below occupation groups will be subject to pro rata arrangements to ensure availability of invitations across the program year.

SkillSelect first allocates available places to Skilled – Independent visas (subclass 189) and then the remaining to Skilled – Regional (Provisional) visas (subclass 489). If all places are taken up by subclass 189 visas then there will be no invitations issued for subclass 489 visas in these occupations.
